

Entertainment

'Extreme Makeover: Home Edition' — The Loud Goodbye

Posted on 01/8/2012 by stacyjenelsmith // AARP Blog Author // 1 Comments

+1 0 Tweet 4 Like

You'd have to figure a show that features sawing and hammering and a wild man shouting through a bullhorn would not go quietly. "Extreme Makeover: Home Edition" makes its farewell appearance after nine years Friday (1/13) with a special two-hour 200th episode. It's an epic job the design team, led by Ty Pennington, is unlikely ever to forget: building seven new homes in seven days in tornado-ravaged Joplin, Missouri.

Designer Paul DiMeo, known affectionately to fans of the show as the soft-hearted Paulie, tells me they got enough video in Joplin for a full season. "They've had a hard time editing it down to two hours. You know, I heard hundreds of stories, walking around during the time we were there, some horrible stuff. This thing took out a third of the city in 30 minutes."

But there are upbeat parts, as there always are on "EM:HE." DiMeo, 54, talks about a little boy whose life was saved by a donated bike helmet his mom got him to strap on as the twister was bearing down on their house.

There are still "EM:HE" specials ahead. DiMeo heads to Knoxville this week to film one, in fact, but it isn't planned for airing until Thanksgiving. Meanwhile, his website thank-you to his colleagues and volunteers, and to his wife, for making their home a place he looks forward to staying in "when it's all over," is enough to get a person a little misty-eyed. Just like the tearjerker show has done for nine years. Have those hankies ready.

Tagged: Extreme Makeover: Home Edition, Joplin tornado, Paul DiMeo, Ty Pennington Share via: f t g+

AARP BLOG

CATEGORIES

Entertainment	Food
Home & Community	Money & Savings
News Roundups	Personal Health
Politics	Relationships
Technology	Travel
Volunteering	Work
Your Life

Search the Blog

stay CONNECTED

author SPOTLIGHT

Elizabeth Brown
View Posts

Sandy Johnson
View Posts

Beth Carpenter
View Posts

View all Authors →

ADVERTISEMENT

AARP Members:
How Much Is Your Good Driving Record Worth?
 You Could Save $357*
Request a Free Quote